<sup>1</sup> 1676a provides the following description: “[Saturday] the 25th of March, on Holy Easter Eve, the church was decorated in the following manner: the pulpit and altar were draped with light brown paraments embroidered in yellow gold; the choir was hung with tapestries, and on the altar stood the usual crucifix and candlesticks. The church was arrayed with silk tapestries richly embroidered with gold; to the right of the altar “The Last Supper,” and to the left of the same “The Ascension.” The electoral box was draped with a red velvet parament embroidered with the electoral Saxon, Brandenburg, and royal Danish coats of arms [representing the royal families represented in the Saxon ruling family]. On the electoral box “The Mount of Olives” was hung; beneath the arch of the electress’s ladies-in-waiting, “Christ as He was taken prisoner in the garden”; under the adjoining arch, “Christ as He was led before Caiaphas”; next to this to the right of the pulpit, “The Scourging”; over the sacristy, “The Crowning [with Thorns]”; over the church door, the “Ecce Homo”; next to this, “The Judgment and Handwashing of Pilate”; then, underneath the arch of the privy council, “The Procession to Calvary”; next to it, “The Crucifixion,” and beneath the electoral box, “The Easter Lamb” (D-DI Msc. Dresd. Q 260, entry for 25 March 1676). For a similar description from 1665, see Frandsen 2006, 401–2.

<sup>2</sup> 1668b: “a high festal vespers was celebrated, and figural music with instruments was used once again; however, the large organ was still closed, and cornetti muti were used” (“ward Eine Hohe Fest Vesper gehalten, und die Musica wiederum figuraliter mit Instrumenten gebraucht, iedoch die große Orgel noch zugemacht und die Cornet muti”).

 Bernhard, Salve festa dies, “in between [the verses of] which Also heilig ist der Tag [was sung] three times”<sup>6</sup> (1662a, 1668b,<sup>7</sup> 1673a, 1676a) =KO 1662

<sup>5</sup> 1665a/c: “Introitus. Salve festa dies, darzwischen 3. mahl Also heilig ist der Tag”; similar wording is found in 1666 and 1667a. The KO 1662 stipulates this manner of performance, in which the German hymn Also heilig ist der Tag was sung in alternation with the verses of Salve festa dies; see Spagnoli 1990, 184. Also heilig has a single verse, and ends with “Kyrieleis.” This alternatim practice dates back to the medieval period in Germany; see Brooks 1910, 106–7. The KO 1662 also stipulates that three half cannons (Cartaunen) were to be fired during the introit (see Spagnoli 1990, 184), but only 1676a records the firing of cannon salvos at this point in the service: “1. Zum Introitu. Salve festa dies. Wozwischen zu dreÿen mahlen, Also heilig ist der Tag, und würden darbeÿ iedesmahl auf den Hohen Wall 3. Halbe Carthaunen gelöhset.”

<sup>6</sup> 1662a: “Salve festa dies. In zwischen dreymahl, daß: Also heilig ist der Tag. C. B.”; similar wording appears in 1673a and 1676a.

<sup>10</sup> 1665a/c designate the work as a “Concert,” 1666 as a “Motett.” Both performances included trumpets

Peranda, “Mottet. Tulerunt Dominum meum 2 Tromb: et Tympani” (1667a)
 Pallavicino, “Concert: Quis est hodie,” with trumpets and timpani (1673a)
